WHAT

powerful and convincing evidence of the value of Bercham's Pills is to be found in one plain fact—that of their world-wide popularity 1 In the Old World and in the New World, in the Eastern Hemisphers as in the Western, proof of the remarkable efficacy of this excellent preparation is to be found in abundance. Everybody speaks well of Beecham's Pills; everybody praises them! The explanation of this universal approval lice in the simple fact that are the real thing and not a make-believe remedy. They do not disappoint the person that persoveres with them. In the treatment of the various aiments to which the dispestive system is subject this medicine has proved a great success. Flatulence, biliousness, faulty dispestion, lack of energy, and many other indications of dispestive derangement yield very speedily to the healing and curative treatment of Beecham's Fills. You cannot do better than try them. Beecham's Pills mean health and happiness to very many—see what they will

Mr. H. G. Wells's latest book is on the subject of religion. It is a not very profound attempt, by one who has discarded dogmatic Christianity, to provide some kind of reasoned and satisfying religion in its place. The writer is very much in earnest, and a fervour for God burns in these pages, but the book leaves us asking where Mr. Wells got his God, and whether He has any better title to be sought and worshipped than the Father of sought and worshipped than the Father of Jesus Christ. Nevertheless, "God, the In-visible King" will be sure of a wide audience just because it is the confession of faith of Mr. H. G. Wells. It is a personal confession—that is what constitutes the chief interest of the book. Mr. Wells has been seized with the conviction of God, and he has all the zeal of the prophet to impart his discovery. Such an immediate experience of God is, of course, of first-hand authority for the prophet himself, and is entitled to respect; but when the prophet proceeds to theologise about his God he inevitably submits his cause to the court of reason, to challenge and criticism.

the back of all known things there is an impenetrable curtain; the ultimate of existence is a Veiled Being which seems to know ence is a Veiled Being which seems to know nothing of life or death or good or ill. Of that Being, whether it is simple or complex or divine, we know nothing." But God may be known; Mr. Wells knows Him; has heard Him "as a still small voice within"; is sure that He is on the side of life, not death; of good, not ill; that "He is our friend and brother and the light of the world. So it comes to pass that Mr. Wells differentiates the Veiled Being from God. With much that Mr. Wells says about God most Christians will agree, but they will agree because agree, but they will agree because he has filled out the content of his God with borrowings from the Chris-

The cry of dereliction on the Cross was but the expression of a momentary agony, not of a habitude of spirit, and it was succeeded by the cry of achievement and the complain just now of the misgovernment of the world: we think we have an action against somebody. As for Mr. Wells's polemic against misconceptions of God, as that He is a God of Magic, or a Quietest God of repose, or a Jealous Avenger, or interested in sexual matters, it may be admitted that some beliefs and practices of a pagan origin have attached themselves to Christianity; but they do not belong to it, as the whole New Testament witnesses.

These considerations must not allow us 94 GRAFTON STREET, DUBLIN. to forget for an instant the immense difficulties of the Government's task. In the first place, it is quite possible that a large body of Irishmen may repudiate the Con-V A N S vention. If all the people who call themselves Sinn Feiners decide to follow the AND LORRIES. The Government will merely have proved to the world-though that have proved to the world—though that would be no small service—that what Ireland chiefly needs to-day is a firm and even handed administration of the law. In the next place, even if the bulk of Sian Fein deserts its titular leader and sends some of its best men to the Convention, the problem of agreement will remain not less formidable than it has been at any time in the last three years. The various Nationalist elements in the Convention will have one principle in common—Home Rule for an undivided Ireland. If they can argue the Southern Unionists out of their connection with the war:

tive, and, as she insists, absolutely final, policy of partition. Partition is more objectionable to most Nationalists than even the Act of Union; yet it is those very qualities of experience and business apacity which, as we have said, make ionists indispensable to the Convention Byrne that have convinced the Ulstermen that partition would be less bad than a Parliaent in Dublin. That is the circle which the Government asks the Convention to square. We agree that a body of wellselected Irishmen will be better fitted for he task than any body of Englishmen, but it would be folly to have any confi dence in success. We are sure, however, of one thing-that, if Unionists enter the Convention, they will be ready to sacrifice verything except national and Imperial nterests to the cause of unity among Irishmen.

The Government and Labour.

The announcement by the Prime Minister esterday of the Government's decision appoint Commissioners to investigate whole subject of labour unrest will give general relief of mind. So that the investigation may be speedy without being inadequate, a number of separate Commissions will set to work in severalrobably, seven-areas. Their instrucons will be to inquire generally into the dustrial unrest, and specially into the operation of all emergency war legislation and its administration in regard to labour; and they will be asked to make recommendations which may tend to minimise industrial unrest, especially in the shipbuilding and engineering trades, dur-ing the rest of the war period. GERMANY DOOMED TO DISAPPO'NT—
We have heard this morning that the Germans are depending mainly on the 60 boat warfare for success in the war.

All I can say is, that if that is their main hope of success, it is doomed to disappointment. (Chera)—I say that with the submarines. (Chera)—I say that with the sub clear to the public that their co-operation is an essential part of this policy, and of this confidence in the future, and that unless all these elements are introduced, of course then the public can produce disaster by extravagance. The agrarian population can engineer disaster by refusing to do their share. The workmen by refusing to do their share. The workmen can also do the same thing by refusing to use tractors.

But if everybody in the community does his duty patriotically, contributing each in his own way to the common stock, then I say the submarine is not going to defeat us. (Cheers.)

GRAND CONCERT IN DUBLIN.

A grand concert will be held this evening at the Mansion House, when a programme of special attractions, including soldier artistes and gold medallists, Feis Ceoil, 1917, will be presented. The concert is under distinguished patronage, and the proceeds are in aid of the St. John Ambulance Brigade and the Free Buffets at railway stations for sailors and soldiers. During the peat two years 807,804 men have been provided with free meals, and the good work will continue if funds are forthcoming. One shilling will provide meals for twelve men.
